Man denied appeal for top cop stop

COURT An Ontario man sent to jail after the province's top cop pulled him over for speeding and found drugs in the car has not been granted leave to appeal his conviction.

Curtis Wint, a 24-year-old Kitchener man, was flying along Highway 401 at 170 km/h when he blew by a police cruiser.

It wasn't just any police car — this one was carrying none other than Ontario Provincial Police Commissioner Julian Fantino. Fantino was on his way to a speaking engagement, but put on his high-way patrol officer hat and pulled over the car.

On Thursday, the Supreme Court of Canada dismissed Wint's application for leave to appeal.

Baseball Home not so sweet, but Jays sweep up

Toronto Blue Jays Vernon Wells is tagged out at home plate by Philadelphia Phillies catcher Carlos Ruiz during the eighth inning of Thursday's game in Philadelphia. The Jays won 8-7 and swept the three-game series with the Phillies. More coverage, page 24.

More than blowin' in the wind

Researchers at the University of Western Ontario are planning to build what they say is the world's first-ever wind tunnel that can create tornado-like conditions and offer insight into how to harness the power of wind.

The facility, called the Wind Engineering, Energy and Environment — or WinDEEE for short — will be used to research ways to protect people from storms and optimize positioning for wind farms and turbines.

The unique shape of the wind tunnel, to be built in a hexagon-shaped dome, will make it the first facility capable of physically simulating spinning wind systems, like tornadoes.

The project will receive $9.5 million in funding from the Canada Foundation for Innovation, an independent corporation created by the federal government to fund research infrastructure.

The total estimated cost of the project is $23.6 million.

Bills look for greater access to cyberspace activity, info

The Conservative government wants to give police greater powers to eavesdrop on Canadians in cyberspace, but civil liberties advocates aren't convinced the changes are justified.

Justice Minister Rob Nicholson and Public Safety Minister Peter Van Loan introduced two bills Thursday that would give law enforcement much greater access to private Internet communications.

The proposed legislation comes just a day before the House of Commons rises for the summer, and might not survive long before a potential fall election is triggered. Still, the Liberals tabled a similar bill when they were in power, and might back the Conservative version.

"It just looks like a grab ... of our civil liberties."

David Fewer

One of the major changes would give police the ability to obtain personal details about a subscriber without first getting a warrant.

That has raised serious concerns among defenders of privacy and personal freedoms.

"I haven't seen the evidence that substantiates a relaxation of civil liberties in this area," said David Fewer, director of the Canadian Internet Policy and Public Interest Clinic at the University of Ottawa. "It just looks like a grab, under the name of modernization, just a grab of our civil liberties."

Nicholson, flanked at a news conference by police officers, said the changes were necessary to keep up with the changing times.

Listeria inquiry coming?

Agriculture minister rejects calls to further probe outbreak

Canadians need a full public inquiry into the death of 22 Canadians from last summer's listeria outbreak and increased inspection oversight in meat plants, a parliamentary investigation has concluded.

After two months of hearings, the parliamentary food safety report also found health authorities

"We've had it for tainted blood. We had it for Walkerton. We had it for SARS. We're obviously going to need it for listeriosis."

Amir Attaran, University of Ottawa

lost precious time warning the public because they were immersed in confusion and "turf wars."

Agriculture Minister Gerry Ritz, who quickly dismissed calls for a public inquiry yesterday, did not respond to an interview request.

"We've had it for tainted blood. We had it for Walkerton. We had it for SARS. We're obviously going to need it for listeriosis. But Parliament so far has not managed to push the Conservatives to do that," said Amir Attaran, professor in the faculty of law and medicine at the University of Ottawa. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Auto parts sector in tough for 2009

REPORT Canada's auto parts sector will cut its workforce by one-third this year as it undertakes a "massive restructuring" to cope with the global slump in vehicle sales, a new report said yesterday.

The Conference Board of Canada says the industry will lose $173 million in 2009 and will respond by laying off 36,500 workers.

Sabrina Browarski, an economist with the Ottawa-based think tank and author of the report, said the forecast would mean the largest single-year decline in employment in Canada's auto parts industry since the Conference Board started tracking the data in 1987.

Southern Ontario will feel the brunt of the parts industry's restructuring, as most Canadian suppliers are located there.

Production is estimated to fall by 39 per cent in 2009, but with an anticipated rebound in U.S. auto sales, will allow the industry to reverse its losses next year.

Firefighters praised for response

FIRE Toronto firefighters have put out what could have been a disastrous fire, after a three-alarm blaze broke out at a century-old home in Kensington market Thursday afternoon.

Fifteen fire trucks and nearly 60 firefighters were on the scene at 47 Oxford St. near Spadina Avenue where the fire started in the attic of the semi-detached home at lunchtime.

"The fire had potential to be really big, but the firefighters brought it under control, and prevented it from causing a lot more damage," said Capt. Mike Strapko.

There is no word yet on what caused the fire.

Eight residents were evacuated from the semi-detached house, including the two who lived in the home where the fire started.

It's unclear at this point whether the residents of the house will be allowed back in anytime soon.

"The fire went through the roof. It has to be covered up, because it's supposed to be raining all night," said Strapko.

Despite the chaotic scene on Oxford, Strapko commended the quick-response of the firefighters. "They actually saved two homes."

Small puppy killed after hit-and-run

WALK The Arabczuk family had walked their beloved dog Coco on the same street every day for almost a year since they got the one-year-old puppy from a family friend.

However, when 73-year-old Teresa Arabczuk took Coco on their usual route Thursday morning, an unexpected step off the curb ended up killing the dog in a shocking hit-and-run.

"She's upset, I'm upset," said Greg Arabczuk, her 40-year-old son.

The dog, on a retractable leash, had stepped out from the curb onto the street when a speeding car tore through the lane and struck the dog. The small, grey four-door car failed to stop. Arabczuk said there was no chance the driver didn't realize he struck the dog. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Toronto architect envisions turning Gardiner into lush park

Call it the ultimate "green roof."

The Gardiner Expressway — the city's key commuter route into downtown — could simultaneously become a swooping centrepiece park with the addition of a plant-covered upper deck as envisioned by a Toronto architect.

Similar to westside Manhattan's scenic — and instantly popular — High Line Park, which opened this month along the path of an old railway track three storeys above street level, Toronto's elevated expressway could offer a unique enhancement to the city's downtown, says Les Klein, founding principal at Quadrangle Architects.

"I've been appalled at the sheer folly of taking down the Gardiner," Klein told the Toronto Star in advance of yesterday's speech at the ideaCity event, where he unveiled his dream. "It's about thinking innovatively, keeping it, adding on to it, renovating it, and renew-

"That's the fundamental part of the organic growth of cities."

His idea, dubbed the Green Ribbon, calls for the addition of a new level about eight metres above the highway's elevated section, from Dufferin Street to the Don Valley Parkway. Columns would be added to the side to anchor the new level, which would become a linear park stretching for seven kilometres.

Estimated costs range from $500 million to $600 million. Over the years, various ideas have been floated for the expressway. None of those proposals have gathered steam

Garbage strike? Compost more, says enviro group

UNION As the City of Toronto prepares for a possible garbage strike as soon as Monday, environmentalists are disappointed officials aren't urging people to step up use of backyard composters.

Garbage can be dropped off at any of the city's seven waste transfer stations and more will be announced if it drags on.

Toronto Environmental Alliance expressed its displeasure with the oversight on the city's part to assume people would put all their garbage in one bag and not make any attempts otherwise.

Inflation down, consumer costs up

Canada's inflation rate fell to the lowest level in almost 15 years last month, but Canadians will feel that most prices are climbing and some are even soaring.

Consumer prices in May were actually up 0.7 per cent from the previous month, with most items costing more, including the price of filling up the family car at the gas station.

But because inflation is measured on a year-to-year basis, the official inflation

Major city inflation rate statistics

The annual inflation rate was 0.1 per cent in May, says StatsCan, down from 0.4 per cent in April. The agency released rates for major cities, but cautioned figures may fluctuate widely because they are based on small statistical samples (Previous month in brackets):

- St. John's, N.L., 1.1 (0.9)
- Halifax, -0.8 (-0.1)
- Saint John, N.B., -0.1 (0.0)
- Quebec, 0.4 (0.4)
- Montreal, 0.4 (0.6)
- Ottawa, 0.5 (0.9)
- Toronto, 0.5 (0.8)
- Edmonton, -0.2 (-0.6)
- Calgary, -0.7 (-0.3)
- Vancouver, 0.1 (0.4)

rate dipped to virtually zero in May to 0.1 per cent, the lowest it has been since November 1994, when it stood at -0.1 per cent. In April, the annual inflation rate stood at 0.4 per cent.

The current minuscule inflation rate is almost exclusively due to energy prices, Statistics Canada noted, and even in this category, Canadians could be forgiven for doing a double take.

"The decline in the energy price index was due more to high prices in 2008 than to recent market developments," the agency reported, a reference to the period when the price of oil was soaring on its way to a record $147 US a day in July.

In more recent times,

Canadians are paying more for energy, particularly for gas. Drivers paid 8.3 per cent more at the pump in May than in April.

They also paid more in May over the previous month — as well as over last year — for most foods, alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages, tobacco, household operations and furnishings, recreation, education and reading material, and public transportation.

Excluding energy, inflation in Canada remains close to where the Bank of Canada would want it at 2.3 per cent.

Core inflation, which excludes volatile items, stood precisely at the bank's two per cent target.

Unique program encourages teen reading

More than 24,700 — and counting.

For a high school with just 550 students, the number of books borrowed from the library at Sir Robert L. Borden Business and Technical Institute is the highest in the Toronto board, higher than secondary schools four times its size.

And that number is still on the rise, as teacher-librarian Peggy MacInnis wraps up her third annual "summer sign-out," where she trusts teens enough to let them take out books for the next two months.

Some borrow 30, 60, even 100.

"What good is it having this many books on the shelves all summer?" MacInnis said of her holiday book loan, unique in the Toronto board.

Not one volume has gone missing in the past two summers.

"I will get 100 per cent return," she said. "I know these kids really well. They sign out books every day."

Students are hooked on graphic novels, which they can read in a couple of hours, sometimes less.

MacInnis has even started a Friday lunch-hour book club, which has 20 members, and posts student pictures on her "wall of fame" once they've read 100 books.

Sunny Side

"They don't read traditional literature," she said. "It doesn't click."

Four years ago, before stocking the shelves with graphic novels, students borrowed just 500 books during the entire school year.

Aboriginal convocation at Ryerson

PROGRAM Thirteen students earned their social work stripes in an unusual Ryerson University program designed for aboriginals who plan to work with First Nations communities.

The three-year, fast-track program is run jointly by Ryerson and First Nations Technical Institute near Belleville and it injects a native cultural sensitivity in both the curriculum and how it is taught, making sure more than half the instructors are aboriginal.

The program is tailored to mature students with families and jobs, allowing them to study in one-week blocks every six weeks, on a campus near where they live.

Before the official convocation ceremony yesterday, the program held a special drum circle in the courtyard where family members bounced to the beat of the traditional honour songs.

Carney seeks system reform

Central bank's governor looking to plan for the worst

Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney is calling for major changes in the Canadian and world financial system, saying core credit markets failed the test last fall and helped trigger the recession.

In a speech prepared for a business audience in Regina on Thursday, the central banker praised Canada's financial system as among the best in the world. "But this crisis has proven that even the best is not good enough," he added.

Carney is among the strongest advocates in Canada for what he calls a new "macroprudential" — whole system based — approach to regulating financial markets and has voiced concerns in the past about how the system re-

Federal Natural Resources Minister Lisa Raitt talks with Thierry Dujardin of the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency at a meeting earlier this week in Toronto.

Feds want reactor up

The government of Canada wants the Chalk River reactor back online sooner than the current estimate of mid-August, Natural Resources Minister Lisa Raitt said Thursday, as she spoke of how to manage a worldwide shortage of medical isotopes.

"Certainly managing the global shortage is very difficult and certainly knowing that the Canadian reactor plays such a big part in the global supply chain, we would like things to move faster," Raitt said in Toronto.

"But (Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.) has to take the appropriate safety precautions to get it done."

The Chalk River, Ont., reactor, which makes about one-third of the world's supply of medical isotopes, shut down more than a month ago after a heavy water leak.

Officials estimated it would be down for three months, which would be until mid-August, but the head of AECL told a House of Commons committee earlier this month that it may take even longer.

Hugh MacDiarmid called three months optimistic, but refused to put an upper limit on the shutdown's duration.

Raitt gave opening remarks Thursday morning at a meeting in Toronto of an Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development medical isotope supply working group.

Alcohol limit should stay same, says report

DRINKING A new report is recommending the legal blood-alcohol limit for drivers stay where it is.

Drivers who exceed the .08 limit can be criminally charged. The limit was incorporated in the Criminal Code in 1969.

Impaired driving is the No. 1 criminal cause of death in Canada. But the House of Commons justice committee says in a report tabled Thursday that, without proof a lower limit would boost safety, practical considerations must take precedence.

Lowering the Criminal Code's blood-alcohol content limit would create another 75,000 to 100,000 impaired driving cases on top of the current caseload of more than 50,000 criminal cases annually, the MPs say.

The majority report says law enforcement and justice resources are best directed at the most dangerous drivers who are already well above the legal limit.

Toxic session is over

MPs leave the Hill Friday for three-month summer break

A routine spending vote Friday will uncork and drain the latest toxic sitting of Canada's long-running minority Parliament for the three-month summer recess.

But in the words of one well-connected political scientist, that will still leave two scorpions in a bottle.

No matter how you parse this week's election-averting "collaboration" between Prime Minister Stephen Harper and Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff, the two political adversaries will return in September to renew their confidence showdown.

"It's like two scorpions in a bottle," Tom Flanagan,

Prime Minister Stephen Harper responds to a question during question period in the House of Commons Thursday.

Harper's former chief of staff and campaign strategist, said in an interview Thursday. "They can't get out and they're stuck with each other."

The spring session of Parliament ended much as it began in late January, with a crescendo of empty Opposition threats that resulted in strategic government backpedaling — with a timetable set for a repeat performance in a few months' time.

Harper's Conservatives ended more than a decade of surplus federal budgets with a massive spending document on Jan. 27. It earned only grudging "probationary" support from Ignatieff's Liberals, and none at all from the Bloc Québécois and NDP.

The session ends with the Tories promising changes to the Employment Insurance system, designed in co-operation with Liberals, in return for another Grit extension to late September.

Six-year ordeal ending for Canadian man in Sudan

STRANDED Abousfian Abdelrazik's long ordeal is almost over.

The Harper government said Thursday it will comply with a court order to let the Montreal man return home. Abousfian Abdelrazik, a Canadian with family in Montreal, was arrested, but not charged during a 2003 visit to Sudan to see his ill mother. He says CSIS and American FBI officers interrogated him over alleged terrorist links.

The government had refused to give him a passport on the basis he remains on a UN terror watch list. But Federal Court Justice Russel Zinn ruled this month that Ottawa breached Abdelrazik's constitutional rights and ordered him returned within 30 days.

The man and his supporters waited almost two weeks to hear whether the government would follow the order or appeal to a higher court.

Justice Minister Rob Nicholson announced the news in the House of Commons.

Abdelrazik, a Canadian with family in Montreal, was arrested, but not charged during a 2003 visit to Sudan to see his ill mother. He says CSIS and American FBI officers interrogated him over alleged terrorist links.

Zinn said the government's claim Abdelrazik couldn't fly to Canada due to his inclusion on the UN blacklist was actually "no impediment" to his repatriation.

News in brief

REPORT A parliamentary committee says the federal government should purge false information from the files of three Canadians who were jailed and tortured in Syria. The public safety committee also urges the government to compensate and apologize to the men. It says Canada should do "everything necessary" to remove false allegations about the men and their families in records held by national security agencies. Last fall, an inquiry found that Canadian officials contributed to the overseas torture of Abdullah Almalki, Ahmad El Maati and Muayyid Nureddin by sharing information with foreign agencies. The men are suing the government, but the committee says that should not stand in the way of an apology. Conservative members of the committee issued a dissenting report rejecting the recommendations for redress.

WAIT TIMES Government efforts to slash healthcare waiting times across the country have failed to target a wider range of clinical procedures, says a coalition of Canadian medical specialists. Under a $5.5-billion deal signed in 2004, Ottawa, the provinces and the territories focused on improving wait times in five areas they deemed priorities. A study released Thursday by the Wait Time Alliance says only "spotty progress" has been made in the last year in cutting wait times in the identified clinical areas.

Hundreds of thousands rally

Mousavi, followers continue protest, defying Iran's highest power

Hundreds of thousands of protesters wearing black and carrying candles filled the streets of Tehran again Thursday, joining opposition leader Mir Hossein Mousavi to mourn demonstrators killed in clashes over Iran's disputed election.

The massive protest openly defied Iran's supreme leader, despite a government attempt to placate Mousavi and his supporters by inviting the reformist and two other candidates who ran against hardline President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad to a meeting with the country's main electoral authority. Mousavi and his followers allege Ahmadinejad stole the election. A Mousavi website said the crowd exceeded one million.

Independent witnesses said that, based on previous demonstrations at the site, the size of the crowd appeared to be in the hundreds of thousands. Foreign news organizations are barred from reporting on Tehran's streets.

The demonstrators had marched silently until they arrived at the square, where some chanted "Death to the dictator!" one witness said. Photos posted online showed Mousavi talking through a loudspeaker, dressed in a black suit and dark blue shirt as he raised a hand to address the crowd. The participant confirmed the authenticity of the images.

After dark Thursday — as they have done on other nights this week — people went to their roofs and chanted, "Mir Hossein!" in support of Mousavi, and "God is great!"

Ahmadinejad released a largely conciliatory recorded statement on state TV, distancing himself from his past criticism of protesters, whom he compared to

"Every single Iranian is valuable. We like everyone."

"dust" and sore losers after a soccer match. "I only addressed those who rioted, set fires and attacked people," the statement said. "Every single Iranian is valuable. The government is at everyone's service. We like everyone."

Iran's supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, has urged the people to pursue their allegations of election fraud within the limits of the cleric-led system.

Mousavi and his followers have rejected compromise and pressed their demands for a new vote, flouting the will of a man endowed with virtually limitless powers under Iran's constitution.

PETA rips Obama for killing house fly

BUG The group People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals wants the flyswatter in chief to try taking a more humane attitude the next time he's bedeviled by a fly in the White House.

PETA is sending U.S. President Barack Obama a Katcha Bug Humane Bug Catcher, a device that allows users to trap a house fly and then release it outside.

"We support compassion even for the most curious, smallest and least sympathetic animals," PETA spokesman Bruce Friedrich said Wednesday. "We believe that people, where they can be compassionate, should be, for all animals."

During an interview with CNBC at the White House on Tuesday, a fly intruded on Obama's conversation with correspondent John Harwood.

"Get out of here," the president told the pesky insect. When it didn't, he waited for the fly to settle, put his hand up and then smacked it dead.

"Now, where were we?" Obama asked Harwood. Then he added: "That was pretty impressive, wasn't it?"

A wax model of Barack Obama equipped with a fly swatter is shown Thursday at Madame Tussauds museum in London.

I got the sucker."

Friedrich said PETA was pleased with Obama's voting record in the Senate on behalf of animal rights and noted he has been outspoken against animal abuses.

Still, "swatting a fly on TV indicates he's not perfect," Friedrich said, "and we're happy to say that we wish he hadn't."

Deputy press secretary Josh Earnest said the White House has no comment on the matter.

Al-Qaida allegedly behind attack

BOMBING Somalia's national security minister and at least 24 other people were killed in a suicide attack Thursday, and an extremist Islamic group with alleged links to al-Qaida claimed responsibility. Britain would heat up: Study

CLIMATE CHANGE Britain's soggy summers will become warmer and drier, and London could experience scorching heat waves by late this century, a government-backed report on climate change said Thursday.

The study outlines three scenarios for climate change, based on high, medium and low global levels of greenhouse gas emissions. The report said the medium emissions scenario, to which the world is currently closest, would see summer temperatures in Britain rise by about 4 C by 2080. Rainfall is projected to decrease in summer and increase in winter, bringing a greater chance of both drought and floods.

"Rainfall overall over the year will stay pretty much the same, but there will be increases in the winter and decreases in the summer," said Vicky Pope, head of climate-change advice for Britain's weather-forecasting service, the Met Office. Pope said that by the 2080s London could see temperatures hit 41 C on hot summer days. The report said that even if strong measures are taken to cut carbon emissions, greenhouse gases already in the atmosphere will make summer temperatures 2.3 C hotter than now by the 2040s.

U.S./MEXICAN BORDER Two U.S. federal agencies are being faulted for not co-ordinating efforts against border gunrunners, a failure one lawmaker says made it easier for Mexican drug cartels to smuggle illegal weapons from the U.S. The Government Accountability Office criticized Immigration and Customs Enforcement and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives for not working together to stop the flow of guns into Mexico. Citing ATF data, investigator Jess T. Ford said that over the past three years, more than 90 per cent of the firearms traced after being seized in Mexico have come from the U.S. The figure is slightly less over a five-year period.

Private guards protect soldiers

The increased reliance on private companies to provide basic security for Canadian bases in southern Afghanistan is freeing up critical military manpower, officers say, although some soldiers worry about the effectiveness of local Afghan guards.

Several operating bases in the dangerous Panjwaii district are now farming out the sentry work, the latest switch-over coming just this week. "It definitely gives us flexibility," said Maj. Steve Jourdain, infantry commander and head of a patrol base. "If it was not for the private security, it would not be possible for me to do the next operation." In this case, the Canadian-owned security company Tundra Strategies won the contract. PAKISTAN Suspected U.S. missiles pounded militant hideouts Thursday in the tribal belt near Afghanistan where Pakistani troops are building up for a major offensive against a top Taliban leader. The strikes, which killed at least eight people and were described as coming from unmanned drone aircraft, appeared not to be directly connected to Pakistan's preparations in South Waziristan.

NORTH KOREA The U.S. military was tracking a ship from North Korea Thursday that may be carrying illicit weapons, the first vessel monitored under tougher new UN rules meant to rein in and punish the Stalinist state after it conducted a nuclear test, officials said. Sri Lanka probe sought

Human rights groups have called for an international investigation into wartime abuses in Sri Lanka.

They say the government lacks the political will to investigate the abuses on its own.

Rights groups accused the government of firing heavy weapons into civilian areas in the final months of the island nation's civil war, which ended last month. The Tamil Tigers were accused of holding civilians as human shields and shooting those trying to flee.

"The national leader did not surrender ... but fought attaining martyrdom."

Rebel official on the death of his chief

Amnesty International is one of the groups calling for an investigation.

"Families of the victims and survivors need answers," said Yolanda Foster, the London-based group's Sri Lanka expert.

UN figures show more than 7,000 civilians were killed in fighting this year.

Meanwhile, the Tamil Tigers' intelligence wing has confirmed rebel chief Velupillai Prabhakaran was killed. "The national leader did not surrender and was not arrested, but fought attaining martyrdom," said Kathirkamathambiy Arivazhakan, a top rebel intelligence official.

Security forces are sweeping the country for rebel sleeper cells. Police said they killed three rebels. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.K. PM bills taxpayers for ironed shirts

POLITICS Thick black strokes of a censor's pen hid many facts Britain wanted to see Thursday.

The most outrageous details of lawmakers' expenses claims were missing. But many sensational tidbits survived.

• Prime Minister Gordon Brown claimed the cost of a satellite TV package, and charges to have his shirts ironed.

• Senior opposition Conservative lawmaker George Osborne charged $77 for two DVDs of one of his own speeches, entitled Value For Taxpayers' Mon-have weeds removed from his chimney.

• One lawmaker charged 1.6 cents for a 12-second phone call.

The Telegraph also revealed how some lawmakers manipulated rules to furnish or upgrade homes, avoid taxes, or claim for mortgage payments on home loans that had already been paid off.

"I don't think we are at the end of this story at all," said Alistair Graham, a former chairman of a parliamentary scrutiny committee.

Everyone has a favourite memory of spending summers at the cottage and if you don't, you must have heard a story or two. The cottage experience is as Canadian as peameal bacon or real maple syrup and should be experienced by everyone at least once in their life. Sitting by a campfire roasting hot dogs and marshmallows, learning about "smores" and "spider dogs" is a rite of passage for any young camper.

So here I go looking into the options I had to share the cottage experiences I had with my children. What are the options and how can I afford them?

As I looked into cottages, I found it was quite simple to find something to rent but what about ownership? The thought of being able to drop everything after a long week at work and juice the old batteries up along with my kids having a safe, friendly and memorable place to spend their summers would be perfect.

What I found is that cottages can be very expensive. My grandfather had told me the story of how each of his three brothers chipped in five thousand and they got a little place with an out house on Chandos Lake up near Apsley, Ontario, but as a kid I loved that cottage. All I could find for twenty grand nowadays was a pop-up tent trailer that we would need to tow around to campgrounds. Camping wasn't going to be an option anyway as my wife's idea of roughing it was a hotel without room service. Although RV parks seemed like a good option with activities for the kids and security in the off season, I just couldn't get the picture of trailer park boys out of my head.

The cottages I liked seemed to cost as much as my home if not more, some over four hundred thousand. The more I thought about cottage ownership the more I realized it would mean two houses to maintain and the whole idea was to get away from cutting grass and fixing things so I could spend more time with my children and simply relaxing. I could afford a "Fractional Ownership" type cottage with maintenance fees. I could justify the fees as they do all the work, but one hundred thousand for something I could only use for 4 or 5 weeks wasn't the answer either, besides we can only play so many games of crazy eights before the kids would get bored.

Then I found an alternative, it's not a four hundred thousand cottage on the lake but it's not a little trailer in a campground either. They call them "Resorts Cottages" or "Park Model Homes". Just imagine a small cottage look outside and beautifully decorated condo inside for only $59,900 to $129,900. Sounds too good to be true I thought a full ownership cottage, maintenance free and activities for the kids...what's the catch.

It turns out that RV's (recreational vehicles) come in all shapes and sizes and some look just like a little house. One, two and three bedroom models that sleep up to eight comfortably and come fully furnished. You can own one in a resort that has converted itself from a trailer park to a Park Model Resort. They are upscale properties that usually have plenty of activities for everyone from heated pools and Kid's Clubs to recreation halls where they host events like wine and cheese parties or themed dances.

Woodland Estate on Lake Seymour and the world famous Trent Severn was the perfect spot for me and my family. Only 90 minutes from Toronto with great fishing and loads of activities. Woodland Estate is one of the best lakefront properties I have come across and some of the best sunsets we have ever experienced. They made owning a "Cottage" easy and cost effective...without a catch.

BlackBerry maker RIM profit beats analysts' estimates

PROFIT BlackBerry maker Research In Motion sped past analyst expectations with a better-than-expected profit, but the company also gave a forecast Thursday that signals the pace of its growth is slowing.

The Waterloo-based company posted a $643-million US profit, or $1.12 US per share, for the period ended May 30. That was above the $482.5 million US profit a year earlier.

Revenues rose 53 per cent to $3.42 billion US, up from $2.24 billion US a year earlier.

But investor optimism appeared to be faltering as RIM's shares moved down in after-hours trading, dropping more than $4 US on the Nasdaq after the results were announced.

RIM shares ended the regular trading session in Toronto at $86.80, down 36 cents. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chinese-themed mall for Markham

One of Canada's richest men is taking a $1-billion gamble on suburban Chinatown with plans to build a massive mall and luxury hotel/condominium complex in the heart of Markham's Chinese mall district.

Plans for the Remington Centre, an 800,000-square-foot Chinese-themed mall and adjoining 20-storey hotel and condominium complex are expected to be announced by Toronto developer Rudy Bratty's Remington Group Friday.

Bratty, 77, ranked the 58th richest man in Canada by Canadian Business magazine with a personal net worth of almost $1 billion, intends to knock down his existing 325,000-square-foot Market Village mall at the corner of Kennedy Road

Census

• The Toronto area is home to more than 430,000 people of Chinese descent based on the 2001 census. By 2017, that number is forecast to be 735,000 residents.

and Steeles Avenue, further shifting the centre of Toronto's Chinatown to the suburbs. The area is already home to three other large Chinese-themed malls.

Developer Rudy Bratty poses yesterday outside his Market Village shopping complex at Steeles Avenue and Kennedy Road that will be torn down to make way for an 800,000-square-foot Chinese-themed mega mall plus a separate condo and hotel complex — the largest such project outside Asia.

A project of this scale in the Greater Toronto Area is all the more audacious since Bratty is going forward when most traditional retail and commercial builders have closed up shop as the economy and job losses have impacted consumer confidence.

Key to the business plan is that unlike a traditional mall where the developer is the landlord, the mall space is sold like a condominium, where the retail space is owned by the vendors — a commonplace structure in Asia where the risk is shared by investors who buy the units.

Group suggests recession easing

SunnySide

ECONOMY The New York-based Conference Board said Thursday its index of leading economic indicators — designed to forecast activity in the next three to six months — rose 1.2 per cent, the biggest gain since March 2004.

"The recession is losing steam," said Conference Board economist Ken Goldstein. "If these trends continue, expect a slow recovery beginning before the end of the year." However, he said the job market will take longer to rebound. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nortel exec grilled

Chief defends paying bonuses, not severance

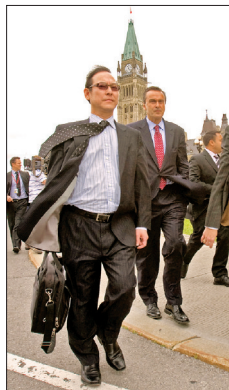

The federal government turned down Nortel Networks when it asked for help to stave off bankruptcy, the fallen technology giant's CEO told members of Parliament Thursday.

Mike Zafirovski told a parliamentary committee that meetings with Industry Minister Tony Clement and Finance Minister Jim Flaherty went nowhere.

The telecom equipment vendor filed for bankruptcy protection in January.

Zafirovski wouldn't say how much financial help Nortel wanted from the federal government and wouldn't say exactly why the government refused to help. He did say there were concerns about the viability of the company and its industry as a whole.

Zafirovski, who joined Nortel as its CEO in late 2005, was grilled about a controversial decision to pay $45 million in bonuses for executives after refusing severance pay for thousands of employees.

Dianne Urquhart, an independent financial analyst who has studied the Nortel situation, said she believes the company went into protection in order to avoid paying the severance bill, even though it had $2.5 billion US in cash on hand.

"Management likely perceived that not paying the severance would lengthen the time period it could operate before exhausting its ... cash," Urquhart said.

Zafirovski defended the bonuses as an effort to hang on to vital executives in an effort to maximize the company's worth.

The CEO also said Nortel's lawyers told him the bankruptcy court would never have approved millions in severance payments. MPs were skeptical of that.

Porter adds Boston as third destination in United States

FIGHTS Porter Airlines, based at Toronto's island airport, said Thursday it will begin flying up to three daily round trips between Toronto's City Centre Airport and Boston Logan airport on Sept. 14.

Porter currently flies to New York and Chicago in the U.S. and has said it is also considering flights to Washington, D.C., and Philadelphia.

Porter launched its service in the fall of 2006 using 70-seat turboprops built by Bombardier Inc. in Toronto. Its business plan ultimately calls for service to 17 short-haul destinations in Canada and the United States.

The airline also flies to Ottawa, Montreal, Halifax, Quebec City and, starting later this month, Thunder Bay.

In brief

FORESTRY Toronto-based Fraser Papers has begun a court-supervised bankruptcy restructuring in Canada and the United States as it tries to deal with a battered market and pension funding shortfall. The company employed 2,600 people at the end of 2007 and operates paper, lumber and specialty packaging mills in New Brunswick, Maine, New Hampshire and Quebec. It said weak lumber and pulp markets led to losses and offset profits in its paper business.

Much work remains for LGBT rights

Wendy Cukier

Pride Week marks remarkable progress: Same-sex benefits, same-sex marriage, and recent human rights decisions make Canada a global leader on lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgendered (LGBT) rights.

Corporate leaders set the tone. Ed Clark, CEO of TD Bank Financial Group, proclaimed: "I don't want people to feel they have to hide who they are because they're afraid we'll discriminate against them. In fact, I look forward to the day when all employees feel that their sexual orientation is a non-issue."

KPMG and IBM explicitly include LGBT in definitions of workforce diversity and IBM includes gender reassignment surgery in its benefits package. Attracting and retaining the best and the brightest drives corporate commitment. LGBT consumers — the "pink dollar" — are influential. Moreover, research shows 42 per cent of straight consumers will not buy from companies deemed homophobic.

But LGBT people are still vulnerable. Last November, a same-sex couple was assaulted outside an Oshawa daycare.

Growing up LGBT is tough: According to Mental Health America, the average LGBT teen hears anti-gay slurs 26 times a day. EGale Canada's 2008 survey showed 67 per cent of LGBT teens felt unsafe at school and only half felt accepted. Rejection or fear of rejection by their family often fuels desperation. Forty per cent of LGBT youth report having had suicidal thoughts and they are 3.4 times more at risk for attempting suicide.

On average, six per cent of runaway youth identify as LGBT and in some communities rates are much higher. LGBT teens are also more prone to high risk behaviours and drug abuse.

Susan Magerman teaches in Toronto's Triangle Program, the only Canadian high school program specifically aimed at LGBT youth. More than 70 per cent of her students, aged 14-21, do not live at home. Some have been kicked out. Some have fled abuse. Some are searching for somewhere they belong.

Triangle struggles to offer a lunch program and needs resources for breakfast because most of the students subsist below the poverty line. Most students have been marginalized and traumatized. Some have experienced homophobia, harassment and abuse since primary school.

Magerman says, "Once they are in a safe and supportive environment, where they no longer have to worry about their safety all the time, they thrive."

Her wish? "That all kids, regardless of sexual orientation, are supported at home, at school and in their communities so the Triangle program does not need to exist."

Remember, while we march with Pride to celebrate progress, much work remains.

Wendy Cukier is the associate dean of the Ted Rogers School of Management at Ryerson University, and the founder of Ryerson's Diversity Institute.

Who is to blame for a possible strike?

UrbanCompass

April Lindgren

metronews.ca/lindgren

The prospect of a city workers' strike that will shut down many services next week is infuriating. So who should we be furious with?

Mayor David Miller tops the list. With a recession in full swing and key labour negotiations underway, Miller and band of fellow hypocrites on council pushed through pay raises for themselves in April. This means the city is definitely not bargaining from a position of strength as it seeks concessions from its 18,000 indoor workers and 6,200 outdoor workers.

City demands for concessions are further discredited by other recession-era settlements with employees of the Parking Authority, Toronto Housing, Toronto Hydro, the police, firefighters and the TTC. Workers in all those cases got at least a three per cent annual pay increase in contracts that will last three to five years. It should come as no surprise that inside and outside workers are fighting to keep what they have.

That said, many Torontonians who have been battered by the tough times will have little sympathy for municipal employees who could be on the picket line by Monday.

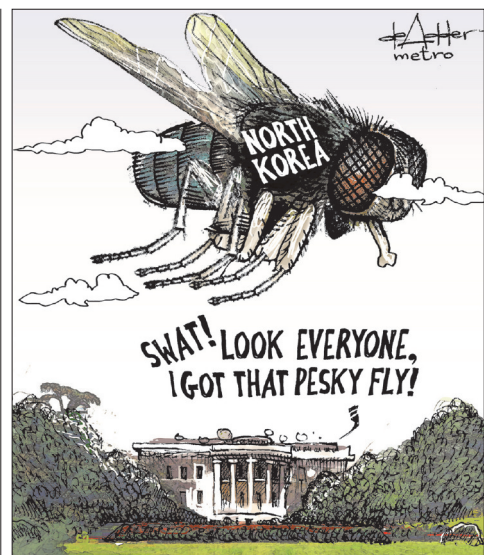

In all fairness, however, municipal employees should not be the only ones required to endure some pain when the city is grappling with lower tax revenues and higher welfare costs. In an ideal world, everybody would do their bit.

But this is the real world.

Workers have come to believe that an unused sick day is, by right, an end-of-career holiday. Staff and councilors defend pet projects regardless of their merit. Taxpayers balk at any hint of service reductions or tax hikes. And the city's mayor — who should be in the vanguard — most certainly does not lead by example.

Infuriating? Yes. Something to remember during the next municipal election? Definitely.

April Lindgren teaches at Ryerson University's School of Journalism, where she specializes in local news and urban affairs reporting; april.lindgren@arts.ryerson.ca.

Rod Barajas turned the boos directed toward him into jeers for the slumping World Series champions.

Barajas led off the ninth inning with a pinch-hit, tiebreaking homer and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Philadelphia Phillies 8-7 Thursday to complete a three-game sweep.

"You try to give your best effort every time," said Barajas, an unpopular player in Philadelphia since playing here in 2007. "I have a job to do. If it's against the Phillies or the Royals, you have to produce."

Raul Chavez and Adam Lind also homered for the injury-riddled Blue Jays, who were 0-6 in interleague play when they arrived in Philadelphia.

Jayson Werth, Jimmy Rollins, John Mayberry Jr. and pinch-hitter Greg Dobbs went deep for the Phillies, who dropped to 13-19 at home hours after putting slugger Raul Ibanez on the disabled list.

The NL East leaders are a major league-best 23-9 on the road, but have struggled all year at a usually sold-out Citizens Bank Park. After the Phillies rallied for two runs in the eighth, Barajas drove one out to dead centre off Ryan Madison (2-2). Filling in for injured closer Brad Lidge, Madison blew a save Tuesday night.

Barajas had a key hit in each game of the series, including a homer off Jamie Moyer on Wednesday night. Barajas hit a pair of homers, including a grand slam, in a victory here last year.

First round of U.S. Open rained out

GOLF Already played on a long course, the U.S. Open suddenly turned into a long week.

Tiger Woods began his title defence Thursday on soggy Bethpage Black by having his caddie hold an umbrella until it was time to hit his opening drive. He didn't finish seven holes before Bethpage was too soaked to continue.

Relentless rain covered the greens in water and created tiny streams in some of the fairways, forcing the first round to be suspended after only three hours 15 minutes. No one played more than 11 holes.

More than a game

South Africa gets boost from soccer tournaments

Field of Play

Scott
Russell

metronews.ca/fieldofplay

It's easy to be cynical about big time sport these days. After all, an Arizona judge has just melted Hamilton's hockey dreams.

Former slugger Sammy Sosa, it turns out, is a drug cheat while another baseball star, Mel Hall, has been sentenced to 45 years in prison for rape.

But take heart. At soccer's Confederations Cup in South Africa there's something really good surrounding "the Beautiful Game."

South Africa will be the host of the 2010 World Cup, a landmark occurrence in a country that has endured so much racial strife under the oppression of apartheid. It will be the largest foray into sport ever on the African continent. The Confederations Cup is meant to be the dry run for next year's main event and features eight of the world's top soccer nations.

It was heartening to see 62,000 in the stands of Johannesburg's Ellis Park Stadium on opening day as the host South Africans took on Iraq. Back in Baghdad, millions watched their beloved champions on giant screens in public squares, a first in that devastated soccer-loving country since the American invasion of 2003.

In the meantime, the South African side featured a solitary white player cheered on by a vast majority of black supporters — a signal that change for the better had become reality.

Add to that the appearance in other matches of many of the world's top talents like Fernando Torres of European powerhouse Spain, Brazil's brilliant midfielder Kaka, and a bevy of stars from the reigning World Cup champion country of Italy.

Not long ago, South Africa was forbidden territory for international sport. But before kickoff, President Jacob Zuma erased the memories with one statement.

"It is not a day for speeches," Zuma said. "It is a day for us to enjoy the game."

Just when you're about to give up on sport it can surprise you. Proving once again that it has substantial power beyond its fields of play.

Growing up, Adam Lind's father was a high school baseball coach, and that allowed Lind to be exposed to the game at a relatively high level when he was very young.

Lind owes a lot to his dad

DAVID SINGH
for Metro Toronto

Even as a little boy, Adam Lind was on the baseball field with players who were much older than him.

With his father being an assistant coach of the Highland High School baseball team in Anderson, Ind., Lind would constantly tag along to the games. It was there that the current Blue Jays slugger got his first taste of baseball at a higher level.

"When I was six, seven and eight years old, I was out on the field with high school kids," Lind said. "So I saw the level they played at, which isn't really that high, but when you're eight years old, it's a pretty fast game."

"When I first started watching the games I couldn't even follow the ball," he added with a laugh.

As an assistant coach, Lind's father had round-the-clock access to the team's field and equipment. When the younger Lind eventually reached high school, he made sure to take advantage of such perks. Lind and his father would visit the diamond almost every day during the season for batting practice. "While a lot of my friends were at the pool, I'd take an hour out to go to the baseball field," said Lind. "It wasn't work, it was just something I enjoyed to do — trying to get the ball over the fence."

Getting the ball over the fence is something Lind, 25, has become accustomed to these days. Entering Friday's action, Lind's 48 RBIs and 14 home runs ranked first and second on the Jays, respectively.

Pretty good considering he's the youngest player in Toronto's veteran-laden starting lineup.

Even though his father played a role in helping him get to where he is, Lind doesn't really need to thank his dad this coming Father's Day. He did that daily when he was in high school, expressing gratitude as his dad never flinched when it came time to brave the Indiana summer heat for his son's batting practice.

"He wasn't a baseball coach or player by trade, by any means, but whenever I wanted to go out and do stuff, he'd do it," Lind said with a smile that soon turned into a grin. "And during the summer, it's not real hot in Indiana, but it's pretty warm."

Battle over future of Coyotes continues

NHL While billionaire Jim Balsillie will skip today's rally in support of his efforts to bring an NHL team to Hamilton, lawyers will be preparing more briefs for a hearing Monday designed to keep the Coyotes in Phoenix.

Balsillie is encouraging fans to gather at noon at Jackson Square in downtown Hamilton in order "to be heard," by the NHL, Balsillie said in a news release. Balsillie won't attend because the timing competes with events around the release of a new BlackBerry device, said his spokesman Bill Walker.

But a more important date is Monday when the NHL expects bankruptcy court judge Redfield T. Baum to give final approval to an auction of the team for Sept. 10, although it is possible a new schedule could be set.

According to court documents, parties interested in buying the Coyotes should have their applications to the NHL by June 26.

Preliminary bids are expected by July 20 with final bids due Aug. 10. NHL approval for all bidders will come Aug. 24, and the auction will occur Sept. 10.

The NHL has said it hopes bidders will come forward who would keep the team in Phoenix. If none come forward, the NHL will consider relocating the team.

Balsillie's advisers say they will renew their offer to buy the team, but have not filed such a motion in court.

Brazil rediscovers flair against U.S.

CONFEDERATIONS CUP Brazil put on a vastly improved performance Thursday to beat the United States 3-0 and move closer to a spot in the Confederations Cup semifinals.

Felipe Melo put Brazil ahead in the seventh minute before Robinho and Maicon scored goals that typified the traditional flair and vigour that had been absent from the South American champion's narrow opening win over Egypt.

Robinho rounded off a 20th-minute counterattack of near breathtaking efficiency before Maicon, who had threatened throughout, started a second-half move on the right that ended with him lifting the ball from a narrow angle over goalkeeper Tim Howard.

The win at Loftus Versfeld gave Brazil six points in Group B, six more than a United States side that was dealt a red card for a second straight game and is now almost certain to be eliminated from the tournament.

The Americans never looked like securing the point needed to maintain a realistic chance of progress and didn't manage a chance until substitute Benny Feilhaber hit the bar with seven minutes left.

Despite focusing before the match on Brazil's attacking fullbacks, the team was unable to contend with Maicon's runs down the right and struggled throughout with the pace of the game.

Maicon set up Felipe Melo's seventh-minute header and in the first half alone came close to creating another two goals after Robinho's effort, which came from a move that started with a corner kick to the United States.

Man U boss calls Ronaldo fee 'vulgar'

SOCCER Manchester United director Bobby Charlton describes Real Madrid's transfer payment for Cristiano Ronaldo as "vulgar," but says there is no ill feeling toward the player for leaving.

Charlton said manager Sir Alex Ferguson can be trusted to use the $147.5-million transfer fee to recruit top-notch players, although he acknowledged the departure of the club's best player had prompted some "soul searching" at Old Trafford.

The two clubs expect to complete the world record transfer before the end of the month, a year after United had successfully fended off an earlier bid by Madrid for the Portugal winger.

"Ronaldo leaves us because as a young boy he always dreamt about playing for Real Madrid, so if he leaves us it is with our blessing," said Charlton.

Megan Fox admits to gaining the pounds for her role in Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen.

Transforming Fox

Actress weighs in on role in blockbuster sequel

NED EHRLBAR
Metro World News

Megan Fox is known for her curves, but for Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen, even those weren't enough for notoriously picky director Michael Bay.

"He's not super-big on really scrawny girls. He likes more muscular types," Fox explains while sucking on a piece of candy.

"I gained eight pounds, and I ended up gaining another eight pounds during the filming of the movie."

For all her infamous beauty, Fox confesses she has horrible eating habits. "I eat maybe once a day, and I eat at 10 at night. I don't eat a lot. I'm not a healthy person," she says. And when it comes to exercising, she doesn't fare much better.

"I usually make it to one training session a week."

But the young actress, known for speaking her mind, realizes that type of lifestyle can't endure. "I'm 22. I mean, I'm prepared for when I hit 28 and I have to change my whole s— up, but for now if I can get away with it, I'm going to do it."

One thing Fox hasn't

been able to get away with is keeping a low profile, not when she regularly tops men's magazine hot lists and her every move is chronicled by the paparazzi. But Fox takes a surprisingly diplomatic view of the celebrity industrial complex.

"Whoever they're taking pictures of, that's not you," she says. "You let it happen because that's a job, and I have to respect that job. It's how they pay their bills and how they feed their families. I can't s— on them for doing that."

While she's been enjoying the big-budget playgrounds of the Transformers movies, Fox is looking forward to a smaller project hitting theatres this fall: Jennifer's Body, written by Oscar-winner Diablo Cody.

"It's a really dark comedy," Fox says of Cody. "She's like a postmodern feminist or whatever."

Year One silly fun

Year One

Director: Harold Ramis

Stars: Jack Black, Michael Cera, David Cross

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Year One wants to be one of those rare comedic treats: The smart dumb comedy. It's prehistoric parable that satirizes the foundations of human civilization, while also tossing in plenty of poo jokes to please the masses.

Unfortunately the overall balance leans more towards easy laughs than social commentary, but you have to admire the intent and the hit-to-miss joke ratio is pleasingly high. It's what should be expected from the latest comedy from director Harold Ramis (the brains behind Animal House, Groundhog Day and other comedy classics).

As we know from the trailer, Jack Black and Michael Cera star as a pair of slacker cavemen incapable of either hunting or gathering. However, this material comprises only the set-up of the movie.

The pair quickly leave their tribe to explore the world and soon find themselves stumbling onto a variety of biblical characters and settings including Cain and Abel, Isaac and Abraham, and the original party town, Sodom.

For Ramis, it's a step back to his early days of Caddyshack, a ramshackle ensemble comedy that lives and dies on the improv of the cast. Year One has the comedic energy and unpredictability of those early movies, but also has their sketch-comedy structure and narrative messiness.

The film ends on message preaching individuality over a reliance on society or religion. It's smart and appropriate, but feels awkwardly shoehorned into a film that works best as sketch comedy.

their best as the leads, playing their well-worn comedic personas and doing it well. Virtually every sequence comes with a scene-stealing cameo, but special notice should go to David Cross' cynical Cain, Hank Azaria's circumcision-obsessed Abraham ("It's going to be a sleek look"), and Oliver Platt's sleazy high priest who insists on getting hairy-chested oil rubs from Cera (every bit as hilarious and disgusting as it sounds).

Year One is pleasant escapism with a brain. Sure, it's more like Mel Brooks' silly History Of The World: Part 1 than Monty Python's satirical masterpiece Life Of Brian, but at least it provides audiences with the opportunity to giggle at irreverent humour for 90 minutes without feeling guilty afterwards.

Cameron Diaz thought it was hilarious last year when the paparazzi thought she'd shaved her head. In My Sister's Keeper, Diaz plays the mother of a girl with cancer, and at one point in the film her character takes out the clippers out of solidarity with her daughter.

Of course, mix Diaz, a bald cap and an outdoor film shoot with photographers who watch her every move hovering, and what you get is an inevitable brouhaha.

"They say what they want to say to sell their pictures," says Diaz, who's no stranger to odd claims being published about her. But she still has her flowing blonde locks today, thankfully.

"If I shaved my head and my hair was this long right now, they would have me in a lab somewhere," she jokes.

"Kerastase or L'Oreal would have already taken me somewhere."

For the actress, part of taking on such a complex, serious role successfully means being able to leave work at the office at the end of the day.

"You have to put things to the side and you have to be yourself and be who you are and be with the people who support you," she says. And as casual as she tries to be, all this work dealing with terminal illness still got into her head.

"It makes you really think about what you're putting into your body and what's out there that can damage you," Diaz says. "There is a reason. It can't just be coincidence that everyone's getting sick."

REVIEW The premise of The Proposal seems so obvious and ripe for comic potential that it's amazing no one thought to make it until now: A hard-nosed boss (Sandra Bullock) tries to avoid deportation back to Canada by claiming to be engaged to her beleaguered assistant (Ryan Reynolds).

The charade gets out of hand when they travel to Alaska to visit his family. It's just a shame the filmmakers decided to do it with such by-the-numbers romantic comedy execution (complete with a winking-at-the-audience race to the airport).

The movie succeeds despite its flaws, though, thanks primarily to the chemistry between its two leads. The older woman dynamic seems downright subversive by romantic comedy standards, and Bullock and Reynolds easily show why it shouldn't be. And their comic timing is perfectly matched.

As much fun as she's having with the character, Bullock still seems to be holding back, though. In the first ten minutes, the filmmakers spend an awful lot of time telling the audience how horrible she is as a boss, how everyone fears and dislikes her, but they don't let Bullock do anything that would warrant such a reputation — most likely out of fear of moviegoers deciding her employees are right. She pulls off the second half of the equation, though, in humanizing Margaret and showing the vulnerability underneath without making it too cloying.

Some small-town gags land poorly, such as the oddball (Oscar Nuñez) working every conceivable job or the only Internet access being a coin-operated dial-up modem — as if a well-to-do estate like Andrew's family wouldn't have WiFi, even in Alaska. Then there are plot elements that are brought up only to be dropped all together, like Malin Ackerman's red herring of a cute ex-girlfriend.

But even when the audience can see the next gag coming a mile away, the film still shines thanks to the performances of Bullock, Reynolds and the scene-stealing Betty White as Andrew's conniving granny. White's adorable, off-beat performance alone is reason enough to see it.

Porn star dishes on Girlfriend Experience

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

The protagonist of Steven Soderbergh's new film The Girlfriend Experience is a poised young escort who services New York's philandering elite with uncommon élan.

Blankly charming and immaculately coiffed, Chelsea (Sasha Grey) is a strange and eminently 21st century creature — the call girl as image-conscious entrepreneur. Chelsea's precociousness as both a sex object and a self-promoter gains credibility by Grey's own back story: At the ripe old age of 21, the California-born performer is already a before-her-time legend in the porn industry and a mild pop cultural phenomenon.

"It did help me," says Grey when discussing the resonances between her own career and that of her onscreen alter ego. "But I'm not sure about the idea of 'credibility.' After all, we're not talking about a real person, we're talking about a character in a movie.

"I always try to be introspective (about what I do), whereas Chelsea's capacity for introspection is quite minimal. That's why she uses personology. It's an excuse so that she doesn't have to be responsible for her actions. If something goes wrong, it's in the cards."

Grey is referring to her character's pathological fidelity to a genre of New Age literature. In a crueler film, this might have simply been used as punchline, but in The Girlfriend Experience — in theatres next week — it's clear that Chelsea's faith in "personology" is no more foolish than her high-rolling clients' faith in a collapsing economy (Soderbergh started shooting the same week that news broke of the mortgage crisis).

Porn sensation Sasha Grey stars in Steven Soderbergh's The Girlfriend Experience.

"I don't think that the film is trying to manipulate anybody's thinking about anything," says Grey, "whether it's the idea of prostitution as a business, or about the men who hire (prostitutes), or about the economy. Whereas another film might be looking to

ADAM NAYMAN

REVIEW From the dazzling self-reflexivity of Irma Vep through the grotty B-movie hijinks of Boarding Gate, Oliver Assayas is practically peerless when it comes to generating narrative and stylistic momentum.

So what to do with Summer Hours? This drama about three adult siblings (Charles Berling, Jeremie Renier and Juliette Binoche) trying to decide what to do with their late mother's cherished country house, is atypically sedate

Even so, it feels very much of a piece with the director's oeuvre. One of Assayas' main preoccupations is generational tension, manifested here in two questions: Can you literally hold on to the past, and, if so, to what end? The answers are bound up in the ultimate fate of the estate, which becomes a source of familial debate.

Refreshingly, Assayas permits each of his characters (and their motivations) a certain level of respect and empathy — doubly impressive given the pleasure taken by so many contemporary French filmmakers in exorcising bourgeois protagonists.

There is a sense of inevitability to the film's final movements, yet Assayas elides any sense of predictability through the adeptness of his staging. The finale, which echoes his earlier film Cold Water, suggests a mingling of past and present, with a sympathetic eye to the future. It's the year's most glorious ending, a vision of eternal recurrence as a raucous house party.

Sticking to the film formula with Baby

The Baby Formula

ADAM NAYMAN
 for Metro Canada

There are things to like about stuntwoman-turned-director Alison Reid's shoestring feature debut, about a middle-class lesbian couple who surreptitiously take advantage of cutting-edge medical technology to conceive children sans sperm.

Chief among them are stars Angela Vint and Megan Fahlenbock, who effortlessly suggest the lived-in intimacy and irritation of couple-dom (the latter being something that's generally absent from idealized or eroticized mainstream depictions of lesbian relationships).

PrideWeek Toronto

- There will be a special Pride Week "meet the cast of The Baby Formula" party on Saturday at 9:30 p.m. at Slacks (562 Church St.). Admission is with a ticket stub from a Friday or Saturday performance of the film.
- For more information on all 2009 Pride Week activities in Toronto, visit pridetoronto.com.

The fact that both actresses were actually pregnant during the shoot lends a sense of authenticity to their characters' mounting excitement, anxiety and exhaustion (not to mention their ever-swelling bellies).

This line-blurring is effective, yet what ultimately does The Baby Formula in, however, is its reliance on convention.

Having established a promisingly fraught situation, Reid and her co-writer Richard Beattie unfortunately opt for strength-in-crisis sentimentality, implausibly softening certain characters — like Vint's intolerant, religiously devout mother and her aggressively self-deluding brother — so as to facilitate a hopeful conclusion.

There are other problems, too: A mock-doc framework featuring Reid as filmmaker following the couple with a camera crew is inconsistently realized, and one late revelation introduces errant notes of melodrama.

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

In 2004 David Bezmozgis burst onto the literary scene with the critically acclaimed bestseller Natasha And Other Stories. The book earned the author instant credibility in the literary world and now he's hoping for a similarly strong film debut with Victoria Day.

While it is certainly filled with wonderfully authentic moments that clearly came from the author's pen, the film simply doesn't hold together well. It's unsurprising that Bezmozgis' greatest success came from writing short stories, because Victoria Day is filled with interesting sequences and characters. It just lacks a compelling narrative thread to hold them all together.

Mark Randall stars as Ben Spektor, a Toronto teen who lends money to a friend to buy drugs at a concert in the first scene of the film and never sees him again. What follows is a week of uncertainty as Spektor struggles with the guilt he feels, while also trying to deal with his recent immigrant parents, a new girlfriend, his burned out buddies, and the pressures of playing high school hockey.

It's all pretty standard coming-of-age stuff with Ben learning a few lessons about responsibility and maturity. Ben's journey is an obvious one, but it wouldn't have necessarily been noticeable if the character wasn't so subdued and passive. It's clear that Ben is emotionally numb and lost in the confusion of adolescence, but it's also hard to care about a character who is so indifferent to life.

Bezmozgis is able to get some great naturalistic performances out of most of his cast (especially veteran theatre actors Sergiy Kotelenets and Nataliya Alexeyenko as Ben's assimilating immigrant parents and first-time actor John Mavro as Ben's wise-cracking best friend).

The writer/director also crafts a few visually impressive cinematic sequences such as a late night fireworks fight between Ben and his friends that's ripped from the memory of countless Canadian teens.

There are enough stand-out scenes and sequences to suggest that Bezmozgis has promise as a filmmaker. It's just a shame that he felt forced to follow an overdone coming-of-age structure so slavishly here.

Light humour lifts heavy Green Chain

The Green Chain

Director: Mark Leiren-Young
Classification: STC
Rating: ★★½

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Filmmaker Mark Leiren-Young's debut feature The Green Chain is a strange and beautiful picture detailing the bitter-sweet struggle between loggers and environmentalists in a fictitious West Coast town whose perspectives on their shared love for trees are radically different.

Adopting a faux documentary style, the film follows seven characters who offer their personal beliefs about foresting and the environment and Leiren-Young ensures that every one of these fictional people offer a relevant point of view. And if the conceit never feels as organic as its creator intends it to be, the ultimate effect is both moving and, when it needs to be, often hilarious. Leiren-Young's background is in stand-up comedy and it shows: The Green Chain has little trouble poking fun (especially with the pontifications of a tree hugging stoner) at what is a relatively sombre, serious subject.

The cast, including Battlestar Galactica's Tricia Helfer and rising star Brendon Fletcher (88 Minutes) are game and manage to sculpt fascinating portraits of small town eccentricity.

The budget for this admittedly oddball left-leaning gem is virtually invisible and it shows (the movie was shot in less than a week) but the director's affection for the subject matter is infectious. The Green Chain is entertaining, even if the ultimate fate of the planet isn't the centre of your web.

Michelle's comeback

Actress reclaiming cinematic stake with Cheri

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

For Michelle Pfeiffer picking roles carefully has paid off well. Not only has her discretion afforded the soft-spoken actress a lengthy career in Hollywood but decent scripts have led to three Oscar nominations, including one for Dangerous Liaisons.

It may not be surprising then that after not appearing on film since 2007, Pfeiffer is reclaiming her cinematic stake by re-teaming with the filmmaking duo behind that aforementioned film — scribe Christopher Hampton and director Stephen Frears.

"They have a tremendous amount of respect for each other," said Pfeiffer recently in New York while promoting Cheri (in theatres next Friday).

"In fact, their relationship on the set is really unlike any other writer-director that I've seen. Usually when movies start, directors are kind of, 'Now it's time for me to take it where I want to take it' and (on this), it's a real collaboration between the two of them and Christopher is there everyday."

Michelle Pfeiffer plays an ageing courtesan in Cheri.

Following their past history adapting classic French novels, Frears and Hampton's Cheri tells the tale of an impossible affair between a spoiled, young navel-gazer and an ageing courtesan named Lea in 1920s Paris.

Although there have been various adaptations over the years, this latest version of famed novelist Colette's work may be the most intimate.

"She had a very scan-

Movie feature

dalous affair with (her teenaged stepson)," said Pfeiffer, comparing the author to her character. "She was ostracized from the family because of it; she was an actress at one point — which was basically the equivalent of being a prostitute at that time — she was very scandalous."

It was just that fascination with the author that further inspired Pfeiffer to take on the role of Lea — just as it inspired Frears and Hampton.

"Stephen would talk about (paying tribute), about being true to Colette and honoring her," said Pfeiffer. "He would constantly be saying, 'Make Colette proud' and 'what would Colette have done?'"

"This is the quintessential Colette book," added Hampton. "I started off wanting to make a film about Colette. This was kind of the next best thing."

Genuine awe at centre of Wind Man

Wind Man

Director: Khuat Akhmetov

Classification: STC

Rating: ⓈⓈⓈⓈ

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

REVIEW There's a genuine sense of humble, practical awe at the centre of the Russian film Wind Man, a aura of "magic neorealism" that hearkens back to the best of Fellini and a rough, Western informed lyricism lifted straight out of Akira Kurosawa and Sergio Leone. This is, of course, a very good thing.

The film tells the darkly whimsical tale of a small Kazakh village (miles away from the twisted, culturally offensive fiction of Borat) that is visited by two ethereal figures. In a stunning, sepia-rendered opening, a wind ravaged desert reveals Death itself, trotting across the tumbleweed blowing plain like a beaten down gunman.

After bringing sickness to a local boy, another mythical creature is found in a peasant's hut, what appears to be an ancient mute angel with a broken wing. The presence of the wounded angel sets forth an alternately funny and cynical chain of events within the community.

Directed by Khuat Akhmetov, Wind Man is the sort of metaphorically rich fable that audiences either reject or adore. This critic leans more towards adoration.

Loosely based on the fantastical short story called A Very Old Man With Enormous Wings by Gabriel Garcia Marquez, the film exploits its confounding supernatural elements to dig deeper into parables of ignorance, racism and economic desperation within impoverished Kazakhstan.

Simply shot, compactly told and enormously entertaining, Wind Man is a film of tragic grandeur and bitter humour.

A scene from Food Inc., which examines how the fast food industry transformed food production.

Much to chew on

Food Inc.

Director: Robert Kenner

Classification: STC

Rating: ⓈⓈⓈ

KEVIN COURRIER
for Metro Canada

It's often been said that you are what you eat. But after a screening of Robert Kenner's incendiary documentary Food Inc. — which examines how the fast food industry radically transformed food production in North America into a stomach-churning enterprise — you just might want to redefine those terms.

While Food Inc. is thankfully not alarmist in tone, the facts it uncovers are nevertheless alarming.

Using as his guides author Eric Schlosser (Fast Food Nation: The Dark Side of the All-American Meal) and UC Berkeley School of Journalism Professor Michael Pollan (The Omnivore's Delight), Kenner examines how the mass-produced food we now consume is not only lacking in proper nutrients; it may also contain potentially harmful bacteria.

The story begins with McDonalds, who set the template for cheap assembly-line food production, then shows how American farms have now become equally uniform — and at the horrible price of creating unhealthy working conditions for both workers and livestock.

We may end up spending less for the food, but we pay dearly for it with increasing cases of diabetes, obesity and E. coli outbreaks.

It's unfortunate, however, that because many of the corporate industrial heads like Monsanto refused to be interviewed for the film, Food ends up lacking dimension. Like An Inconvenient Truth, Food Inc. lays out its argument clearly, but it's only one side of the story.

To be a truly great documentary, Food Inc. needs a few other conflicting morsels of thought to chew on.

Noise-pop group plays soundtrack to movie about bears

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

There have been plenty of unusual gigs over the years — bands have played on the back of trucks, on buses, on an oil rig — but has any group ever played an original set of music to a movie about bears? That's exactly what Los Angeles duo No Age did last week in Seattle.

"It's an idea we've been talking about for a while," says Dean Allen Spunt, the band's drummer and singer. "It's a movie that Randy (Randall, the band's guitarist) really liked when he was a kid."

The noise-pop group performed a 90-minute set of music specifically created for The Bear, an '80s French film shot in British Columbia that follows two bears as they develop a friendship and escape from hunters. It sounds like a wacky, and challenging, project, but Spunt says it wasn't as difficult to pull together as he thought it would be.

"We just watched the movie and felt out the emotions," he explains. "It's mainly animals, so it was easy to pull samples and tones. We have little titles for certain areas in the movie, like 'Morning Time' is a specific tone."

tle International Film Festival, so unless the band gets invited to play at TIFF, it's unlikely they will bring the Bear show to their North by Northeast gig Friday night.

What people can expect is a set filled with the infectious sonic blasts and grunge-like melodies found on their sophomore record Nouns. Spunt says the twosome might also play some tunes off their forthcoming EP, which they just recently finished recording.

The four-song disc, which will be out in September or October, will be more sample heavy than their last record Spunt reveals.

"We've always done samples, but it's a little more present now," he says. "I figured out a way to make them sound better. We write more with them rather than use samples to augment our songs."

"We've tried to expand things and maybe go in different areas that we wouldn't go in," Spunt adds. "It seems to me it sounds nicely saturated. I feel it's like a really nice painting."

disappointed that the group isn't releasing a full-length, but Spunt says the band has always been interested in "quick segments."

"I think concentrating on a full record is a lot of work," he says. "Sometimes you just need to get something out, something smaller. An EP with four or five songs is a good thing to have. Some of my favourite records are EPs."

Whether or not the band will whip off all their new tunes during Friday night's show remains to be seen, but if you're lucky you "may or may not" be able to catch some of the tracks the night before.

"We're playing a secret show," he says, "but we're not sure how secret it is because NXNE set it up."

Making music all about the groove for CATL

BRIAN COULTON
for Metro Canada

When you listen to a recording on 'Adónde Vas?' — 'a Ningún Lado', the debut by Toronto blues trio CATL, don't expect the pattern and polish that's come to be associated with the contemporary album.

Muffled, static-streaked and unconfined, the release is perhaps best characterized by the title of one of its tracks — Ragged and Dirty.

That unpolished quality of the band's brand of blues via Mississippi Delta is a tool vocalist and guitarist Jamie Fleming (who goes by the "CATL" nonsense pseudonym) says is intended to create musical malleability, allowing performance context to dictate what songs sounds like, night to night.

"As we started out as a two-piece, everything had that sort of primordial rawness to it," Fleming says over beers in the backyard of his home-cum-studio, Charlie Feathers' Wild Side Of Life appropriately rotating on a turntable inside.

"We developed this so we could play anywhere — we could play on the street, or someone's house. Oftentimes, we play off the stage, on the floor or a different corner of the club."

The sound that began as a twosome, along with drummer Johnny LaRue, recently turned into a three-piece, with the introduction of Sarah Kirkpatrick (formerly of local garage rock outfit Shitt Hottt) who brings vocals, organ and percussion to the band.

"The songs have developed onto themselves as a three-piece ... (Kirkpatrick) kind of changed the sound in a better way, so we kept her," Fleming says with a laugh. "And I live around the corner," Kirkpatrick jokingly adds.

But LaRue argues her 11-year-long tap dance tenure is a greater influence, contributing to what he says CATL is all about — the groove. "If you look at a lot of music — whether it's 'n' and roll, disco, or blues music like this — it all comes back to the groove," he says. "This is about the hips, not the head."

CATL plays the Silver Dollar Saturday night at North by Northeast.

The live performance plus the groove — difficult to nail down live, adds LaRue — is part of what Fleming calls CATL's throwback to a time when music was played for music's sake, rather than for an audi-ence's consumption. "Music's about community," he says. "That's the way to experience it, to break down the barrier of the performer on the stage." And that's why he says CATL performs: "to make people move."

Iron Maiden voyage

SoundCheck

Alan Cross

metronews.ca/soundcheck

Rock stars having their own jets isn't anything new. Zeppelin and the Stones were first.

U2 always charts one for its tours. And when Metallica goes on tour, each member has his own jet so they can fly off away from each other between gigs. Meanwhile, the road crews are stuck in their bus bunks, humping tons of gear the old-fashioned way — in conveyors of semi-trailers.

Then there's Iron Maiden. Not only did the group have its own 757 done up with a special Iron Maiden livery, the band, crew and equipment all flew together. And in command of the flight deck? The group's singer.

During his solo period, Bruce Dickinson realized that maybe he'd better think about the future. "I thought to myself, 'I don't know if I'm going to be able to make a living out of being a musician in ten years,'" he told me during a recent interview. "Maybe I should have a second job or something."

Not only did Iron Maiden have its own 757 done up with special livery, the band, crew and equipment all flew together and singer Bruce Dickinson piloted the plane on a recent tour.

After taking up flying as a hobby, Dickinson took a series of professional pilot exams and through a happenstance meeting with an old friend (a rock radio DJ-turned pilot), Bruce ended up with a first officer posting with a British passenger airline. For the last eight years, he's been flying both 757s and 737s for Astraeus, a company that provides planes and crews to other airlines. On any given day, Dickinson may be assigned to fly anywhere from Iceland to Ghana.

When it came to the Iron

Maiden world tour, Dickinson went to Astraeus and leased an idle aircraft.

"It just happens that one of the absolute dead times for airline and charter work is January and February. So it worked out perfectly for us to take an aircraft out of the line for two months. The problem was (our equipment) wouldn't fit. The airplane just wasn't physically big enough. So we had to get a full modification of the aircraft approved."

After $500,000 in upgrades and hiring flight attendants, Ed Force One (officially "Flystar 666" to air traffic controllers) was routed from west to east, carefully scheduled to minimize jet lag and to make sure the band (and its singer/pilot) reached maximum energy for 9 p.m. — showtime. Bruce flew the band and crew through 112,000 kilometres while also playing 23 concerts on five continents in just 24 days. The experiment was captured on camera by a Canadian documentary film crew and the film, Iron Maiden: Flight 666, is now available on DVD.

Take that, Bono.

The Nintendo DSi is sleek and small, which makes it the perfect size to tuck into any bag and take it along with you everywhere you go.

New DSi offers fun with photos, music

KATHY BUCKWORTH
for Metro Canada

I am a very popular mom. With my own kids. Why? Because I have a brand new Nintendo DSi. And they have to be extra nice to me to get a turn.

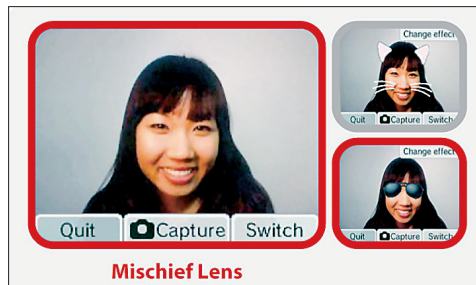

They actually have their own Nintendo DS units, which have been well-used and loved by all four of them, from age seven to 17. But the new DSi was clearly developed with a, ahem, more "mature" crowd in mind. Or so I keep telling them as I held on to it, saying, "One more minute kids, one more minute."

Let's start with the camera. "Fun" and "Photo" come together with the DSi. With a few pen taps, you can quickly capture yourself, or the rest of the world — anywhere you want. Amazing quality and easy to do. And the fun part? You can stretch these shots out by dragging the pen across the screen — distorting family members to the unrecognizable or emphasizing features for maximum comic effect. (I think People magazine must have used one of these for some of their "worst" swimsuit issues.)

Add in comments, draw

With a few pen taps on the Nintendo DSi, you can take pictures of yourself — and others — and distort them for comic effect.

glasses, frame photos, change colours, turn your brother's face into a kaleidoscope, look at mirror images ("Just my good side!"), and because this unit is sleek and small, you can tuck it into any bag and take it along for instant photo fun anywhere (such as waiting at a doctor's office). Pop a photo card into the unit and you can take it out and download the photos onto your computer for printing and sharing with others.

I loved taking a picture, erasing a portion of it, and inserting my own or someone else's face. I've always felt that I should own Cindy Crawford's body; and that my seven-year-old son should get the chance to be a Transformer. Done.

While you won't believe your eyes with the fun you can have with the built-in camera, hearing isn't necessarily believing either with the Nintendo DSi Sound function. Pop in your own sound card and make your music/words sound as though they're being transmitted through a radio circa 1920. Black Eyed Peas — Harry Truman style. Love it. Record your kids' voices and then play around with them by mixing them to sound like a parakeet. (Sometimes the difference is minimal depending on your child's natural voice, as I discovered.)

Between sights and sounds, the DSi is a great addition to any road trip with your kids, a rainy afternoon around the kitchen table, or even under a shady tree at a picnic or outside event. I like it so much, I tried to take a picture of myself on my DSi enjoying my DSi — and it is possible. Now if I can just convince my kids that a "MommyMinute" lasts much longer than the standard 60 seconds.

Jonas bros. ready to take on T.O.

Amid busy schedule, trio will enter new territory when they host MMVAs

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

If there's any doubt whether or not the Jonas Brothers are still one of the most sought after bands in the world, just look at their travel schedule.

"We're en route to the New York airport, then going to Madrid, then London and then to Texas," says Kevin Jonas, the oldest member of the musical family.

"And then we're with you guys."

It's that last stop that thousands of Toronto teens are most excited for — the band is heading north to host Sunday's Much Music Video Awards. While they've been to Toronto before, this will be the first time the trio has ever hosted an awards show.

"This is a big deal for us," says Jonas. "We've been part of award shows, but never done something like this."

Unfortunately, says

Jonas, he hasn't been able to have as much of a hand in the show's planning as he would like. There's just not enough time to do everything he explains.

"We have a tour to focus on, we have a new album out (it was released this past Tuesday), the awards show, so we have a lot on our plate," he says, adding that even though they're busy, "everything is checked off by us, so our hands are in everything we do."

However, fans can expect the band to play songs off their latest record, Lines, Vines and Trying Times, though Jonas "apologizes in advance because it might be a little crazy, we haven't had a chance to practice at all."

It's likely the throngs of screaming followers won't care what the band does, as long as they just show up. In fact, hordes of tweens and teens camped out for two days to get tickets to the MMVAs. All this fanfare is just another day in the life of the Jonas Brothers, who have gone from little known teen band to Disney darlings and music moguls.

"It's incredible," says

Jonas about the success the band has had. "We don't take anything for granted. We're living so many people's dreams and it's a huge opportunity."

But being idolized by 13-year-olds can't last forever, and Disney's stamp of approval will eventually dry out. Jonas doesn't reveal what future plans he has, though, only pointing out that the group have control over their career.

"We are growing up, and while Disney's been an amazing partner, were just making music we love," he says. "No one's telling us what to do."

Music's stars will align on Sunday

A bevy of talent will invade Toronto for this year's MMVAs

BRIAN COULTON
for Metro Canada

When Danny Fernandes rolls into the MuchMusic Video Awards on Sunday, he'll make a red carpet entrance he says has never been seen before.

"I can't tell you what it is, but (fans) can expect something crazy," says Fernandes.

The young Toronto R&B artist is tied with Vancouver-based rockers Nickelback for the most MMVA nominations, with five nods under his belt.

It's a dream come true for the 23-year-old who says he's aspired to attend the annual awards show since he was a kid.

And he's not the first in his family to receive MMVA endorsement.

In 2003, his older brother

Shawn Desman won the award for Pop Video of the Year, which Fernandes is up for this year.

But even though Fernandes received one

Nickelback, Kelly Clarkson, Alexisonfire, Black Eyed Peas, Classified and show co-hosts the Jonas Brothers, who are all among the performers slated to appear.

more nomination than Desman did six years ago, he says it's all love between the siblings.

"Maybe he's a little mad, but the little brother always wins anyways," he says with a laugh.

Fernandes won't take the stage to perform on Sunday, but he'll be entertained by such stars as Avant-garde New York siren Lady Gaga, up for two awards, will also bring her brand of electro-pop to the MMVA stage.

But she says fans can't anticipate how her performance will take shape, and that they'll just have to wait and see.

"I just have to consider the aesthetic," she says.

"There's a lot of factors — is it light or dark out, how big is the stage, the positioning of the audience — you have to take a lot of things into account, but that's why we're planning very far in advance."

Whatever Gaga has planned, however, will be homage to her Canadian fans, who she lauds for helping launch her to fame.

"My whole career started in Canada," she says.

"I'm looking forward to doing a really big performance to thank all my fans for all their devotion."

But it won't be easy. Used to playing full-length shows, Gaga says she'll have to edit down her regular performance style to conform to her MMVA slot.

"I have to pack in the emotional journey of an entire show into three and a half minutes. It's the same ball, on acid."

Francophones get the free party started

Quebec folk-rock quartet Kain headlines Toronto's premier francophone event this weekend, kicking off the summer concert season at Harbourfront Centre.

Although little travelled outside their home province, the group commands an enthusiastic following there, with women screaming for frontman Steve Veilleux and live audiences singing along word-for-word to such hits as Mexico and Embarque Ma Belle.

In keeping with Quebec pop tradition, Kain also holds cross-generational appeal.

Veilleux favours an acoustic guitar and the band seems as happy to show its soft side as to rock out. They play Franco-Fête, as the event is called, on the main waterfront stage Saturday at 9:30 p.m.

Also billed as the biggest French-language cultural festival in Ontario, Franco-Fête features French cooking demonstrations and a children's show with TFO television hosts Dino and Marianne.

OTHER TOP MUSIC ACTS:

- Joanna Moon, a French-Canadian Torontonian who this week launches her debut album Vagabunda, an exploration of Cuban and Spanish flamenco. She sings in French and Spanish, and plays the main stage 2 p.m. Sunday.
- Madame Moustache centres on Geneviève Néron and Julie Ross, two country music fans who formed a band after visiting Quebec's annual rodeo and cowboy festival at St-Tite, between Montreal and Quebec City. Fun-loving, campy and not apt to take themselves too seriously, they open for Kain on Saturday at 8 p.m.

- Bombolessé, an infectious multicultural ensemble from Montreal, mixes rock with Brazilian and African rhythms. They take to the main stage at 2:30 p.m. on Saturday.

Paris promises a clean show

Paris Hilton said she studied the culture of Dubai and promised the Middle East version of her reality show will steer clear of the drinking and the swearing it had in Los Angeles and London.

The remarks came as Hilton, 28, launched the Middle East edition of her Paris Hilton's My New BFF series in Dubai, United Arab Emirates. BFF stands for best friends forever.

"I wanted to know everything about this place first because I wanted to make sure everything was OK," the hotel heiress was quoted as saying by the National newspaper Thursday. "I just want to respect everyone here."

The fame-loving Hilton promised to dress conservatively and said her Dubai-based MTV series will be open to women only. There will be no finger pointing and laughing at anybody, the show's producers said.

"I expect to learn a lot here. It's a completely different world," Hilton said.

Twenty-two contestants will try their best to become Hilton's new BFF in the 20 days she will spend in the Emirates. No air date has yet been set for the show.

When not filming her reality show, intended for broadcast throughout the Arab region, Hilton will explore the desert, go camel riding, get a henna tattoo and go skiing on Dubai's famed artificial ski slope inside a shopping mall.

The show's producer Michael Hirschorn said that the filming will last some three weeks, while the finale will be filmed in Los Angeles. The plan is to build My New BFF into a global franchise, with Hilton searching for BFFs around the world.

Hilton previously filmed two seasons in Los Angeles for MTV and one in London for British television.

Contestants were competing fiercely for the title in the British and the American versions of the show. They drank alcohol and used foul language and tactics to earn it — something producers said will not be allowed in Dubai.

Actress Andie MacDowell, seen here on Thursday at the Shanghai International Film Festival, says she doesn't fear the career-altering shift in movie roles from "the hot thing" to the onscreen mom.

Leading lady no more

PROFILE Four Weddings and a Funeral star Andie MacDowell says her 40s were an awkward time partly because Hollywood filmmakers didn't know how to cast the veteran American actress.

The 51-year-old actress hasn't had a big hit since a string of commercial successes in the early and mid-1990s, including Groundhog Day, Michael, and Four Weddings and a Funeral.

She said Thursday that while she didn't have trouble finding work in her 40s, American filmmakers may have had trouble finding good roles for her.

"In America, there's such a hunger for young people, so you get the young up-and-coming star.

And then it becomes a time period when they really don't know what to do with you or how to use you," MacDowell told The Associated Press in an interview in Shanghai, where she is serving as a juror at the 12th Shanghai International Film Festival. "And then it changes, I think, after 50 — then you become — 'I'm the mother of the 20-year-old.' So I'm hoping there's going to be a shift again and I'll work more," she said.

"I think you have to stay open and flexible and look for opportunities and not be arrogant," she said. "You're so used to being the lead or the hot thing. I think a lot of people get stuck in that moment. And I'm not really stuck in that moment. I just want to participate."

MacDowell, who lives in Asheville, N.C., said she still managed to find artistically challenging roles.

"Of course I would love to have a big box office success. But everything I'm doing, I still feel I'm being challenged. I'm working with interesting people," she said.

Her upcoming films include the thriller, As Good as Dead, and The 5th Quarter, which is about Wake Forest University's 2006 American football season. She said a third movie, The Six Wives of Henry Lefay, a comedy about the funeral of a man with six former wives, may be delayed due to lawsuits, but didn't elaborate.

Oscar-winning Slumdog Millionaire director Danny Boyle on Thursday gently chided China for curbing free

Serving as jury president at the 12th Shanghai International Film Festival, Boyle told a panel discussion that it was "regrettable" that Beijing imposed restrictions on movies.

Chinese directors need to submit their scripts and their final products to censors for approval, with officials often demanding they cut politically sensitive and sexually explicit content.

Dangerous ground

Boyle on Chinese censors at Shanghai film fest

As jury president for the 12th Shanghai International Film Festival, Slumdog Millionaire director Danny Boyle gently chided China for curbing free speech in cinema in a film lecture Thursday.

Oscar best picture Slumdog Millionaire, learning from the experience of his 2000 Leonardo DiCaprio drama The Beach, when he arrived in Thailand with 200 crew members.

"You are an army invading Thailand. You flatten everything in front of you. People just see you as money," Boyle said.

By contrast, he said he brought only 10 crew members to Mumbai to shoot Slumdog, relying heavily on a local crew, which he said worked better because Indian extras "won't react to the controlling instincts of the Western crew, quite the opposite — the chaos just becomes more and more manifest the whole time."

He said he believes working with local crews is the future of Western films shooting overseas.

"The imperialist or colonial days — you have to forget," he said.

Boyle said he also learned how not to view residents of Mumbai's slums patronizingly.

"All the values you bring that encourage pity in you towards the poor are actually redundant when you get there because they have these extraordinary communities living within the slums. They are very poor, visually, but they have this extraordinary resilience and self-support and sense of community," he said.

"Once you got over those feelings of pity that you had as an imperialist for someone poorer than you, you actually found things there to admire. It shifts the whole way you think about things," the director said.

Also in 2006, Chinese filmmaker Lou Ye was banned from making movies in China for five years after he screened Summer Palace at France's Cannes Film Festival without approval.

Lou's love story was set against the pro-democracy student protests at Beijing's Tianamen Square in 1989, which the Chinese military crushed, killing at least hundreds.

"I know there are restrictions on filmmakers, which from our perspective, are regrettable. Great artists who work here — and there clearly are great artists — should be free. It's very important and valuable to the society that they are free," Boyle told a packed audience at a hotel ballroom in Shanghai.

But he added, "But for me personally, given an invitation to come and work here, I'd love to work here," joking. "It would be a challenge learning Mandarin."

Surprise Cyrus show in Ga.

BEACHSIDE CONCERT Miley Cyrus took a break from shooting The Last Song on the Georgia coast by borrowing a guitar and treating fans an impromptu, two-song performance on the patio of a beachside seafood restaurant.

"By the time she finished the first song, there must have been 50 little girls and their moms who came rushing up," said Ray Rogers, owner of StingRay's restaurant on Tybee Island. He caught Miley's surprise gig on video.

Rogers said the 16-year-old Hannah Montana star dined on snow crab legs with a friend after wrap-

Then she got up and asked a local acoustic duo playing music if she could sit in. Miley stepped up to the microphone and strapped on a guitar to sing the Tim McGraw and Faith Hill duet It's Your Love, then added a new song of her own.

"She played those and then we got her out of here," Rogers said. "We asked her, 'What do you wanna do?' and she said 'I want to get out of here.' So we walked her to a side entrance nobody knew about and got her in her car."

The Last Song will be filming on Tybee Island and in nearby Savannah until mid-August, stirring interest among locals and tourists alike. The movie features Cyrus as a teenage girl struggling with her parents' divorce who tries to reconnect with her father during a summer at his home in a quiet beach town.

DESTINATION Thanks to the renewed enthusiasm in Star Trek and a boost from actor Leonard Nimoy, the little Prairie town is taking flight as a standalone tourist destination. Vulcan, which shares its name with the home planet of Mr. Spock from the original space series, has seen an almost 30 per cent increase in tourism.

GAME For those pinning for the return of the '80s comedy smash, this is the next best thing. Cohen on guard for Brüno Sacha Baron Cohen made a grand entrance Wednesday for the British premiere of his new mock documentary Brüno, turning up in a skimpy variation of the uniforms worn by Buckingham Palace guards.

The British comedian came in character as Brüno in a towering bearskin hat, a red military waistcoat and tight black shorts. He was accompanied by a group of similarly attired men whose waistcoats showed off their midriffs.

"I just wanted to do something that was flattering for the Royal Family. Something that the Queen — I'm not talking about Elton John — would really appreciate," said Baron Cohen as Brüno, a gay Austrian fashionista. "You know the British Royal Family and the Austrians have got a lot in common. We're still the only people who are proud to wear a swastika."

Baron Cohen's flashy appearance at the premiere follows his stunt May 31 at the MTV Awards. As Brüno, Baron Cohen descended into the audience on a wire, ending up with his bare behind in the face of rapper Eminem, who stormed off in a show of anger. Eminem later said he was in on the gag.

Brüno begins hitting theatres worldwide early next month, including July 10 debuts in Britain and the United States. The movie is Baron Cohen's follow-up to his 2006 hit Borat: Cultural Learnings of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazakhstan, in which he played a clueless journalist on a U.S. tour.

Fonda blogs about knee-replacement

BLOGGING Jane Fonda has undergone surgery to replace her left knee.

The Oscar-winning actress had the operation Tuesday, and blogged about it beforehand.

In a wistful post titled "So Long Old Knee" on her website, Fonda wrote that her knee joint was to "be sawed out and in its place will go a titanium rod and ceramic joint."

According to Fonda, it had been "a strong, faithful knee." She said it helped her "up a lot of steep mountains and across rugged terrain."

Beer tripping

Ontario's craft breweries are destinations in themselves

If you want to win the favourite kid award this Father's Day, the ability to conjure up a hot, sunny weekend could come in mighty handy.

But failing that, taking dad to visit one of the province's many craft breweries could prove a popular move.

Many of those breweries are located in scenic areas, so you could always make a day trip out of it — providing somebody acts as designated driver for dad, of course — or stay overnight near one of them. The Ontario Craft Brewers site, ontariocraftbrewers.com, has both ideas for day trips to its member properties and even links to nearby sights and accommodations.

Starting off close to home, Cameron's Brewing Co. in Oakville has a couple of Father's Day events on this weekend (see sidebar), one at its brewery and another at a hotel restaurant in Kitchener, Ont.

Another GTA option is the new Black Creek Historic Brewery, which opened earlier this month at Black Creek Pioneer Village.

As you might expect, given its location, the brewery uses historically accurate equipment and methods to make its products — no easy thing, as visitors will learn. Oakville's Trafalgar Brewing Co. is supervising operations at Black Creek Historic Brewery.

Visitors can take the From Field to Firkin: Beer History Tours starting daily at 12:30 and 3 p.m.; the tour ends with a tasting of authentic period ales, and visitors can stay afterwards to enjoy a cold pint in the on-site pub, or take home a growler of beer — a growler being a 64-ounce refillable jug that was commonly used in the 1800s to transport beer.

The cost of the tour is $4, which includes three samples in the brewery. Tickets are available at the Black Creek Pioneer Village admission desk. (Village admission requires a separate ticket). See blackcreekbrewery.ca for further information.

Other events at the village this weekend include a 200-strong re-enactment by soldiers in period costume and a Father's Day barbecue.

If you want to be right up to date on award-winning Ontario beer, head to Neustadt Springs in Neustadt, Ont. three hours north west of Toronto.

The brewery's 10W30 brown ale was just awarded one of 10 gold medals at Montreal's Mondial de la Bière. See neustadt-springs.com.

Beer for dad

- On Sunday, Cameron's Brewing Co. in Oakville will host its First Annual Father's Day Brewery BBQ from noon to 5 p.m. Stop in for brewery tours, burgers from Whole Foods, educated tastings from brewmaster Jason Britton and fresh Cameron's. All are welcome. For more information, call 905-849-8282 or visit cameronsbrewing.com.

- What do you get the father that has everything? How about a six-course meal paired with Ontario Craft Beers. On Friday, Embers Lounge at the Holiday Inn Kitchener is hosting a "Best of" Brewmasters Dinner featuring Cameron's Brewing and Mill Street beverages. Doors open at 6 p.m. and the cost is $60 per person. For reservations or for more information call Chris at 519-894-8523.

Ontario outings

Farmer John Hughes, of Sunridge Farms in Milton, Ont., checks out the strawberry patch on June 9.

It's the berries!

• Apparently, growing sweet and juicy strawberries requires a damp spring followed by warmth and sunshine — we've got the damp spring part down, at any rate.

So this weekend, which marks the official kickoff to Ontario strawberry season, might not be as sweet and juicy as it could be, but the celebrating is due to begin nonetheless. According to the Ontario Berry Growers Association, Sat. June 20 and Sun. June 21 will see the third annual Get Fresh Strawberry Festival takes place across the province. There are 18 local events in all, and if you trundle along to ontarioberries.com, then click on the Get Fresh Strawberry Festival button, you'll find a map that will help you locate the nearest grower. Come to think of it, seeing as cool weather has set the season back a bit, maybe you'll want to hang onto your local grower's contact details and visit them again in a week or two, when, if all goes swimmingly, the weather will oblige us by maximizing the sweetness and juiciness.

Jetting to Thunder Bay

• On June 26, Porter Airlines will begin its new daily summer service to Thunder Bay, Ont. There will be three daily roundtrips during the week and two roundtrips on Saturdays and Sundays. Visit flyporter.com or call 416-

INTRODUCING something new AND worth sharing FROM BREYERS® DOUBLE CHURN

this is love

This spring, Breyers® Double Churn ice cream is introducing three new crave-worthy flavours that you'll fall in love with instantly. Enter, Dark Chocolate Velvet, Banana Cream Pie and Chocolate Cheesecake — all indulgent and all you'll need to share the love.

Breyers Double Churn has created a few simple tips to help you share the love with ice cream...

- Host a girls' night-in with your closest friends and catch up over a "buffet" of new Breyers Double Churn flavours. Give everyone special bowls and spoons so they can try a bit of each or a lot of their favourite.
- Place a scoop of each new flavour on a tapas-style platter. Top each with an ode to its core, natural ingredient. A small slice of banana on Banana Cream Pie; a cocoa bean on Dark Chocolate Velvet and milk chocolate shavings on Chocolate Cheesecake.
- With everything from soup to seafood being served as shots at dinner parties, try serving the new flavours in shot glasses to give your guests a teaser taste of these three new indulgences. Make sure the Breyers Double Churn flavours are a bit soft to ensure easy "shooting."
- Try Breyers Double Churn ice cream cubes when you're having a get together or a night at home with your loved one. Put the ice cream in ice cubes trays, let harden, and then "pop out" the flavours to serve.
- Try a Banana Cream Bellini Freeze this summer. Blend a scoop of Breyers Double Churn Banana Cream Pie ice cream, a quarter cup of peach nectar and a cup of ice. Serve in a martini glass and enjoy with friends!

Brangie's $1M charity gift

PHILANTHROPY Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie have donated another $1 million US to charity, femalefirst.co.uk reports. The Hollywood couple has pledged the staggering sum through their Jolie-Pitt Foundation to help refugees fleeing the Taliban in Pakistan.

Antonio Guterres, head of the United Nations Refugee Agency, has thanked Pitt and Jolie for their generosity. He said: "The situation in Pakistan is the most challenging humanitarian crisis of the past decade."

Earlier this week, Jolie — who has visited Pakistan three times in recent years — recorded a message highlighting the plight of displaced people living in war torn regions.

The 34-year-old actress — who is a Goodwill Ambassador for the United Nations High Commission on Refugees — said in the video: "Please don't turn away. Refugees are the most vulnerable people on Earth. Every day, they are fighting to survive. They deserve our respect. Please do not forget them. Remember them on this day, World Refugee Day." World Refugee Day is on Saturday.

The donation comes just days after they gave $1 million to St. John's Hospital in Pitt's hometown of Springfield, Mo. The money will be used to establish an endowment fund to pay for children's cancer specialists and will also go towards building a new pediatric unit.

I'm not a sex symbol: Ryan

TOUGH STANCE Ryan Reynolds thinks people who enjoy being a sex symbol should be "euthanized," femalefirst.co.uk reports. The X-Men Origins: Wolverine star hates his hunky image because it makes him seem like a "complete a—hole."

The 32-year-old actor said: "If you take any of that sex symbol stuff seriously, you need to be euthanized — ASAP! There are moments when you can use that to your advantage."

"But it's really embarassing. I think I fear more than anything just sounding like a complete a—hole when I have to answer that question."

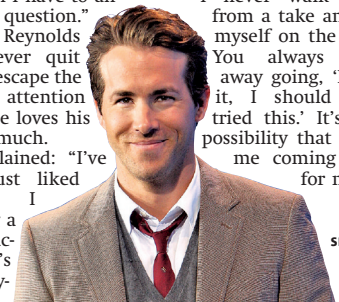

But Reynolds would never quit acting to escape the constant attention because he loves his work too much.

He explained: "I've always just liked working. I like being a working actor. There's an old saying that you don't ever finish a movie, you abandon it, and I really believe that."

"I never walk away from a take and pat myself on the back. You always walk away going, 'Damn it, I should have tried this.' It's that possibility that keeps me coming back for more."

Lindsay's party foul

PARTY POOPER Lindsay Lohan is spoiling the fun for celebrities who use Twitter after she allegedly gossiped about Justin Timberlake on the micro-blogging site while hanging out at Avenue nightclub in New York City, according to Contact Music.

Now the owners of the club want to put a stop to such behaviour. "Celebrities that Twitter about other celebrities will no longer be welcome at Avenue," they said.

Lohan, meanwhile, claims that her Twitter account was once again hacked and that she did not post the offending entry.

All in the Cyrus family

LIKE THE JACKSONS Move over Miley: There's a new Cyrus in the spotlight, people.com reports.

The Hannah Montana star's older sister, Brandi Cyrus, recently performed with her band Frank and Derol, which includes lead singer Codi Caraco and Secret Life of the American Teenager star Megan Park on bass.

The group made their big debut opening for another Cyrus of note — Brandi's dad Billy Ray — at Los Angeles' House of Blues on Sunday.

Not that this was a first gig for Brandi, 22. She's been a guitarist for Miley on tour and on Hannah Montana.

"I was really excited because the House of Blues is such a cool venue and we have been working so hard, rehearsing every day," said Park. "Honestly, I just couldn't wait to get up and do it again!"

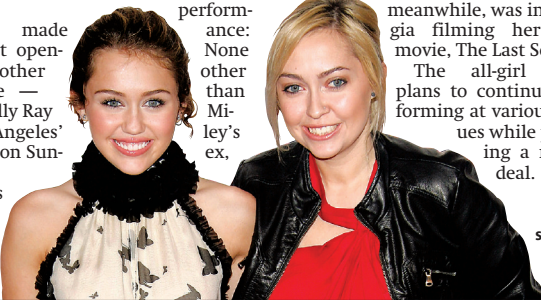

Out to support Brandi's first major public performance:

None other than Miley's ex,

Justin Gaston, who was spotted in the VIP balcony and stayed through the end of the show. Miley, meanwhile, was in Georgia filming her new movie, The Last Song.

The all-girl band plans to continue performing at various venues while pursuing a record deal.

Veal and Mushroom Salad with Basil

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 lb (500 g) veal or chicken schnitzels, cut thin
5 tbsp (75 ml) olive oil
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
3 scallions, finely sliced
1 lb (500 g) mixed small mushrooms, such as button, Swiss brown (cremini) or shiitake, sliced
salt and freshly ground black pepper
1 cup (250 ml) basil leaves
2 oz (50 g) Parmesan, in one piece
4 tbsp (60 ml) beef stock (broth)
2 tbsp (25 ml) port wine
2 tbsp (25 ml) balsamic vinegar
5 oz (150 g) cherry tomatoes, halved

METHOD:

1. Cut veal into thin, even strips. Heat 3 tbsp (45 ml) oil in nonstick pan over high heat. Sear veal briefly both sides. Add garlic and scallions; cook 1 minute. Transfer to plate and keep warm.
2. Heat remaining 2 tbsp

(25 ml) oil in pan. Fry mushrooms over medium heat 5 minutes. Add salt and pepper to taste. Transfer to plate. Slice basil finely; keep few leaves whole for garnish. Use vegetable peeler to shave Parmesan into thin slices. 3. Place stock and port in pan in which veal was cooked; bring to boil and cook briefly over high heat, stirring in juices and any crusty pieces from meat. Transfer to bowl. Add vinegar and salt and pepper to taste. When cooled completely, mix in two thirds of chopped basil.
4. Combine veal and mushrooms; place on serving plate. Drizzle on stock mixture. Top with Parmesan. Garnish with remaining chopped basil, whole basil leaves and tomatoes.
